

CREATIVE DIRECTION

This pack is intentionally varied. The prompts rotate through retro mascots, vintage collegiate lettering, groovy 70s type, western badges, comic halftone, diner graphics, hand-drawn doodles, workwear patches, classic cartoons and phrase-first typography. Every prompt includes its own composition, visual hierarchy, supporting details, palette and output rules.

Exact text: Each design prompt tells the generator to reproduce only the supplied phrase and not invent extra wording.

Merch output: All concepts are centered isolated artwork on transparent backgrounds with no garment mockups, people wearing the design, brand logos, watermarks or rectangular scenes.

Humor range: Food obsession, carving authority, gravy, pie, football, recliners, naps, leftovers, grilling, thermostat dad behavior and family-dinner sarcasm—without turning the entire pack into the same joke.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 001–002

001 THANKSGIVING DAD: OFFICIAL TURKEY TASTER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING DAD: OFFICIAL TURKEY TASTER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

002 DAD'S TURKEY QUALITY CONTROL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S TURKEY QUALITY CONTROL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 003–004

003 I CAME. I SAW. I CARVED.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I CAME. I SAW. I CARVED.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

004 CARVE FIRST. QUESTIONS LATER.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CARVE FIRST. QUESTIONS LATER.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 005–006

005 TRUST ME, I'M THE TURKEY GUY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TRUST ME, I'M THE TURKEY GUY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

006 TURKEY CARVING DEPARTMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY CARVING DEPARTMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 007–008

007 HEAD OF TURKEY OPERATIONS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HEAD OF TURKEY OPERATIONS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

008 CERTIFIED BIRD BOSS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CERTIFIED BIRD BOSS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 009–010

009 DAD VS TURKEY: ANNUAL REMATCH

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD VS TURKEY: ANNUAL REMATCH”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

010 THIS TURKEY IS UNDER DAD MANAGEMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THIS TURKEY IS UNDER DAD MANAGEMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 011–012

011 GRAVY IS A BEVERAGE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRAVY IS A BEVERAGE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

012 GRAVY SUPERVISOR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRAVY SUPERVISOR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 013–014

013 PASS THE GRAVY, RESPECTFULLY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PASS THE GRAVY, RESPECTFULLY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

014 DAD BOD POWERED BY GRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD BOD POWERED BY GRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 015–016

015 GRAVY GOES ON EVERYTHING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRAVY GOES ON EVERYTHING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

016 OFFICIAL GRAVY QUALITY CONTROL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “OFFICIAL GRAVY QUALITY CONTROL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 017–018

017 I PUT THE DAD IN MASHED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I PUT THE DAD IN MASHED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

018 MASHED POTATO MANAGEMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MASHED POTATO MANAGEMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 019–020

019 STUFFING IS MY LOVE LANGUAGE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “STUFFING IS MY LOVE LANGUAGE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

020 STUFFING QUALITY ASSURANCE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “STUFFING QUALITY ASSURANCE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 021–022

021 PIE BEFORE PEOPLE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PIE BEFORE PEOPLE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

022 DAD'S PIE INSPECTION TEAM

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S PIE INSPECTION TEAM”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 023–024

023 SAVE ROOM? I MADE ROOM.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “SAVE ROOM? I MADE ROOM.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

024 PIE IS THE PLAN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PIE IS THE PLAN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 025–026

025 PUMPKIN PIE SECURITY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PUMPKIN PIE SECURITY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

026 PECAN PIE PROTECTION UNIT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PECAN PIE PROTECTION UNIT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 027–028

027 I'M JUST HERE FOR THE PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M JUST HERE FOR THE PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

028 DESSERT DEPARTMENT: DAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DESSERT DEPARTMENT: DAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 029–030

029

THANKSGIVING CALORIES DON'T COUNT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING CALORIES DON'T COUNT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

030

STRETCHY PANTS: ACTIVATED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “STRETCHY PANTS: ACTIVATED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 031–032

031 DAD MODE: FEASTING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD MODE: FEASTING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

032 FEAST MODE: DAD EDITION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FEAST MODE: DAD EDITION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 033–034

033 THANKFUL. FULL. NEED A NAP.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL. FULL. NEED A NAP.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

034 THANKFUL FOR RECLINERS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL FOR RECLINERS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 035–036

035 POST-TURKEY NAP CHAMPION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “POST-TURKEY NAP CHAMPION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

036 NAP NOW. LEFTOVERS LATER.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “NAP NOW. LEFTOVERS LATER.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 037–038

037 THANKSGIVING NAP COORDINATOR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING NAP COORDINATOR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

038 DO NOT DISTURB: DIGESTING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DO NOT DISTURB: DIGESTING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 039–040

039 I EARNED THIS COUCH

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I EARNED THIS COUCH”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

040 COUCH COACH: THANKSGIVING DIVISION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “COUCH COACH: THANKSGIVING DIVISION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 041–042

041 FOOTBALL. FOOD. FAMILY. NAP.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FOOTBALL. FOOD. FAMILY. NAP.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

042 GAME ON. GRAVY ON.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GAME ON. GRAVY ON.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 043–044

043 THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL DEPARTMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL DEPARTMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

044 HALFTIME IS FOR PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HALFTIME IS FOR PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 045–046

045 TURKEY, TOUCHDOWNS & DAD JOKES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY, TOUCHDOWNS & DAD JOKES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

046 FIRST DOWN, THEN SECONDS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FIRST DOWN, THEN SECONDS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 047–048

047 I CALL PLAYS FROM THE RECLINER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I CALL PLAYS FROM THE RECLINER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

048 FANTASY FOOTBALL, REAL GRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FANTASY FOOTBALL, REAL GRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 049–050

049 THANKSGIVING MVP: MOST VALUABLE PAPA

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING MVP: MOST VALUABLE PAPA”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

050 DAD'S GAME DAY FEAST CREW

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S GAME DAY FEAST CREW”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 051–052

051 ASK ME ABOUT MY LEFTOVERS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ASK ME ABOUT MY LEFTOVERS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

052 LEFTOVER SECURITY: DAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LEFTOVER SECURITY: DAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 053–054

053 LEFTOVERS ARE A PERSONAL MATTER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LEFTOVERS ARE A PERSONAL MATTER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

054 I HAVE PLANS FOR THAT TURKEY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I HAVE PLANS FOR THAT TURKEY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 055–056

055 DAY-AFTER SANDWICH ENGINEER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAY-AFTER SANDWICH ENGINEER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

056 CERTIFIED LEFTOVER SPECIALIST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CERTIFIED LEFTOVER SPECIALIST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 057–058

057 TURKEY SANDWICH RESEARCH DEPT.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY SANDWICH RESEARCH DEPT.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

058 DON'T TOUCH DAD'S LEFTOVERS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DON'T TOUCH DAD'S LEFTOVERS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 059–060

059 LEFTOVER LEVEL: PROFESSIONAL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LEFTOVER LEVEL: PROFESSIONAL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

060 FRIDGE RAID COMMANDER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FRIDGE RAID COMMANDER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 061–062

061 I'M THANKFUL YOU BROUGHT FOOD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M THANKFUL YOU BROUGHT FOOD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

062 I BROUGHT THE APPETITE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I BROUGHT THE APPETITE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 063–064

063 THANKFUL FOR WHOEVER COOKED THIS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL FOR WHOEVER COOKED THIS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

064 I SUPERVISED THE COOKING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I SUPERVISED THE COOKING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 065–066

065 I HELPED BY STAYING OUT OF THE KITCHEN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I HELPED BY STAYING OUT OF THE KITCHEN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

066 DAD'S KITCHEN ROLE: TASTE TESTER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S KITCHEN ROLE: TASTE TESTER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 067–068

067 I'M HERE FOR MORAL SUPPORT & PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M HERE FOR MORAL SUPPORT & PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

068 COOKING? I OPENED THE ROLLS.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “COOKING? I OPENED THE ROLLS.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 069–070

069 I CHECKED THE TURKEY. IT'S STILL THERE.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I CHECKED THE TURKEY. IT'S STILL THERE.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

070 DAD'S RECIPE: ASK MOM

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S RECIPE: ASK MOM”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 071–072

071 THANKSGIVING CHEF ADJACENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING CHEF ADJACENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

072 PROFESSIONAL KITCHEN HOVERER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PROFESSIONAL KITCHEN HOVERER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 073–074

073 I HAVE OPINIONS ABOUT THE TURKEY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I HAVE OPINIONS ABOUT THE TURKEY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

074 DAD JOKES SERVED DAILY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD JOKES SERVED DAILY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 075–076

075 GOBBLE TILL YOU WOBBLE, DAD STYLE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GOBBLE TILL YOU WOBBLE, DAD STYLE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

076 GOBBLE? I PREFER DEVOUR.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GOBBLE? I PREFER DEVOUR.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 077–078

077 TALK TURKEY TO ME

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TALK TURKEY TO ME”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

078 TURKEY FUELLED FATHER FIGURE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY FUELLED FATHER FIGURE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 079–080

079 DAD: THE ORIGINAL STUFFING EXPERT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD: THE ORIGINAL STUFFING EXPERT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

080 FULL-TIME DAD, SEASONAL TURKEY CRITIC

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FULL-TIME DAD, SEASONAL TURKEY CRITIC”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 081–082

081 THANKSGIVING: MY SUPER BOWL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING: MY SUPER BOWL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

082 THANKSGIVING IS MY CARDIO

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING IS MY CARDIO”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 083–084

083 FORKLIFT CERTIFIED: DINNER EDITION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FORKLIFT CERTIFIED: DINNER EDITION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

084 MY PLATE HAS A BUILDING PERMIT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MY PLATE HAS A BUILDING PERMIT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 085–086

085 SECONDS ARE PART OF THE PLAN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “SECONDS ARE PART OF THE PLAN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

086 THIRDS? DON'T MIND IF I DO

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THIRDS? DON'T MIND IF I DO”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 087–088

087 PORTION CONTROL IS NOT INVITED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PORTION CONTROL IS NOT INVITED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

088 THIS PLATE NEEDS STRUCTURAL SUPPORT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THIS PLATE NEEDS STRUCTURAL SUPPORT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 089–090

089 BUILT FOR SECONDS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUILT FOR SECONDS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

090 DAD BOD: HOLIDAY EDITION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD BOD: HOLIDAY EDITION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 091–092

091 CARBS ARE FAMILY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CARBS ARE FAMILY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

092 ROLL WITH IT, DAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ROLL WITH IT, DAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 093–094

093 DINNER ROLL DISTRIBUTION MANAGER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DINNER ROLL DISTRIBUTION MANAGER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

094 BUTTER DELIVERY SPECIALIST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUTTER DELIVERY SPECIALIST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 095–096

095 PASS THE ROLLS OR FACE DAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PASS THE ROLLS OR FACE DAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

096 ROLL CALL: I'LL TAKE THREE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ROLL CALL: I'LL TAKE THREE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 097–098

097

CRANBERRY SAUCE SKEPTIC

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CRANBERRY SAUCE SKEPTIC”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

098

TEAM CANNED CRANBERRY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TEAM CANNED CRANBERRY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 099–100

099 CRANBERRY: STILL THINKING ABOUT IT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CRANBERRY: STILL THINKING ABOUT IT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

100 I DON'T TRUST FOOD THAT WIGGLES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I DON'T TRUST FOOD THAT WIGGLES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 101–102

101 THANKFUL, BLESSED & OVERFED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL, BLESSED & OVERFED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

102 BLESSED WITH A DAD-SIZED APPETITE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BLESSED WITH A DAD-SIZED APPETITE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 103–104

103 GIVE THANKS & PASS THE POTATOES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GIVE THANKS & PASS THE POTATOES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

104 GRATEFUL FOR FAMILY. MORE GRATEFUL FOR PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRATEFUL FOR FAMILY. MORE GRATEFUL FOR PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 105–106

105 THANKFUL FOR ELASTIC WAISTBANDS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL FOR ELASTIC WAISTBANDS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

106 FAMILY, FOOD & FATHERLY SARCASM

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FAMILY, FOOD & FATHERLY SARCASM”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 107–108

107 DAD'S THANKSGIVING SURVIVAL KIT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S THANKSGIVING SURVIVAL KIT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

108 THANKSGIVING SOCIAL BATTERY: 12%

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING SOCIAL BATTERY: 12%”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 109–110

109 I LOVE FAMILY. I ALSO LOVE QUIET.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I LOVE FAMILY. I ALSO LOVE QUIET.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

110 ARRIVED HUNGRY. LEAVING SLEEPY.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ARRIVED HUNGRY. LEAVING SLEEPY.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 111–112

111 THANKSGIVING SMALL TALK SURVIVOR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING SMALL TALK SURVIVOR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

112 RELATIVE DODGING CHAMPION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “RELATIVE DODGING CHAMPION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 113–114

113 ASK ME NOTHING UNTIL PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ASK ME NOTHING UNTIL PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

114 DAD'S HOLIDAY CUSTOMER SERVICE IS CLOSED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S HOLIDAY CUSTOMER SERVICE IS CLOSED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 115–116

115 NO POLITICS. MORE POTATOES.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “NO POLITICS. MORE POTATOES.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

116 KEEP CALM AND PASS DAD THE GRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “KEEP CALM AND PASS DAD THE GRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 117–118

117 FAMILY MEETING? I HAVE PIE.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FAMILY MEETING? I HAVE PIE.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

118 I'M LISTENING, BUT ALSO EATING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M LISTENING, BUT ALSO EATING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 119–120

119 MY THANKSGIVING FACE IS RESTING FEAST FACE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MY THANKSGIVING FACE IS RESTING FEAST FACE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

120 DAD'S FESTIVE FACE: MILDLY CONFUSED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S FESTIVE FACE: MILDLY CONFUSED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 121–122

121 WHO MOVED MY RECLINER?

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “WHO MOVED MY RECLINER?”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

122 THE THERMOSTAT IS FINE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE THERMOSTAT IS FINE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 123–124

123 THANKFUL THE THERMOSTAT IS MINE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL THE THERMOSTAT IS MINE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

124 CLOSE THE DOOR, WE'RE NOT HEATING THE OUTDOORS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CLOSE THE DOOR, WE'RE NOT HEATING THE OUTDOORS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 125–126

125 THANKSGIVING THERMOSTAT SECURITY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING THERMOSTAT SECURITY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

126 DAD'S HOUSE. DAD'S TEMPERATURE.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S HOUSE. DAD'S TEMPERATURE.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 127–128

127 YES, I TURNED THE HEAT DOWN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “YES, I TURNED THE HEAT DOWN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

128 PUT ON A SWEATER, IT'S THANKSGIVING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PUT ON A SWEATER, IT'S THANKSGIVING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 129–130

129 THE LIGHTS ARE ON AGAIN?

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE LIGHTS ARE ON AGAIN?”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

130 WHO LEFT THE KITCHEN LIGHT ON?

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “WHO LEFT THE KITCHEN LIGHT ON?”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 131–132

131 THANKFUL FOR LOWER UTILITY BILLS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL FOR LOWER UTILITY BILLS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

132 DAD’S ENERGY CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S ENERGY CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 133–134

133 I'VE BEEN READY SINCE BREAKFAST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I’VE BEEN READY SINCE BREAKFAST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

134 PRE-GAMING WITH COFFEE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PRE-GAMING WITH COFFEE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 135–136

135 COFFEE BEFORE CARVING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “COFFEE BEFORE CARVING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

136 DAD FUEL: COFFEE & CARBS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD FUEL: COFFEE & CARBS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 137–138

137 BREAKFAST WAS JUST A WARM-UP

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BREAKFAST WAS JUST A WARM-UP”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

138 FASTING? NEVER HEARD OF HER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FASTING? NEVER HEARD OF HER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 139–140

139 THANKSGIVING TRAINING STARTED YESTERDAY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING TRAINING STARTED YESTERDAY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

140 I STRETCHED FOR THIS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I STRETCHED FOR THIS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 141–142

141 ATHLETIC SUPPORTER OF THE BUFFET

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ATHLETIC SUPPORTER OF THE BUFFET”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

142 BUFFET BENCHWARMER? NEVER.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUFFET BENCHWARMER? NEVER.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 143–144

143 BUFFET STARTING LINEUP

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUFFET STARTING LINEUP”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

144 FIRST TEAM ALL-FEAST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FIRST TEAM ALL-FEAST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 145–146

145 ALL-AMERICAN PLATE BUILDER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ALL-AMERICAN PLATE BUILDER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

146 HEISMAN OF HAM

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HEISMAN OF HAM”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 147–148

147 TURKEY BOWL LEGEND

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY BOWL LEGEND”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

148 RECLINER LEAGUE CHAMPION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “RECLINER LEAGUE CHAMPION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 149–150

149 UNDEFEATED AT SECONDS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “UNDEFEATED AT SECONDS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

150 HALL OF FAME NAPPER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HALL OF FAME NAPPER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 151–152

151 THANKSGIVING DAD OF THE YEAR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING DAD OF THE YEAR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

152 MOST LIKELY TO STEAL A ROLL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO STEAL A ROLL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 153–154

153 MOST LIKELY TO FALL ASLEEP FIRST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO FALL ASLEEP FIRST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

154 MOST LIKELY TO ASK WHEN DINNER'S READY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO ASK WHEN DINNER'S READY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 155–156

155 MOST LIKELY TO CUT THE TURKEY TOO EARLY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO CUT THE TURKEY TOO EARLY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

156 MOST LIKELY TO EAT WHILE CARVING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO EAT WHILE CARVING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 157–158

157 MOST LIKELY TO CLAIM THE DRUMSTICK

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO CLAIM THE DRUMSTICK”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

158 MOST LIKELY TO HIDE THE PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO HIDE THE PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 159–160

159 MOST LIKELY TO PACK LEFTOVERS BEFORE DESSERT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO PACK LEFTOVERS BEFORE DESSERT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

160 MOST LIKELY TO SAY 'I'M NOT HUNGRY' THEN EAT EVERYTHING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MOST LIKELY TO SAY 'I'M NOT HUNGRY' THEN EAT EVERYTHING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 161–162

161 DAD'S DRUMSTICK CLAIMS DEPARTMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S DRUMSTICK CLAIMS DEPARTMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

162 I CALLED DIBS ON THE DRUMSTICK

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I CALLED DIBS ON THE DRUMSTICK”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 163–164

163 DRUMSTICK EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DRUMSTICK EXECUTIVE OFFICER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

164 LEG DAY: THANKSGIVING EDITION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LEG DAY: THANKSGIVING EDITION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 165–166

165 TURKEY LEG DAY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY LEG DAY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

166 THE DRUMSTICK CHOSE ME

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE DRUMSTICK CHOSE ME”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 167–168

167 DAD'S FORK, DAD'S RULES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S FORK, DAD'S RULES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

168 DON'T MAKE ME USE THE GOOD TONGS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DON'T MAKE ME USE THE GOOD TONGS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 169–170

169 CLICK CLICK: TONGS ARE READY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CLICK CLICK: TONGS ARE READY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

170 TONGS TESTED. DAD APPROVED.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TONGS TESTED. DAD APPROVED.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 171–172

171 BBQ DAD ON TURKEY DUTY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BBQ DAD ON TURKEY DUTY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

172 SMOKE 'EM IF YOU GOT 'EM: TURKEY EDITION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “SMOKE 'EM IF YOU GOT 'EM: TURKEY EDITION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 173–174

173 SMOKED TURKEY SUPERVISOR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “SMOKED TURKEY SUPERVISOR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

174 GRILL DAD'S THANKSGIVING SHIFT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRILL DAD'S THANKSGIVING SHIFT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 175–176

175 PITMASTER OF THE PILGRIM FEAST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PITMASTER OF THE PILGRIM FEAST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

176 LOW & SLOW, THEN EAT IT ALL

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LOW & SLOW, THEN EAT IT ALL”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 177–178

177 DAD'S TURKEY SMOKER SOCIETY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S TURKEY SMOKER SOCIETY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

178 THANKSGIVING PIT CREW

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING PIT CREW”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 179–180

179 I HAVE A MEAT THERMOMETER AND OPINIONS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I HAVE A MEAT THERMOMETER AND OPINIONS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

180 TEMP CHECK CHAMPION

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TEMP CHECK CHAMPION”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 181–182

181 THE TURKEY IS DONE WHEN I SAY IT'S DONE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE TURKEY IS DONE WHEN I SAY IT'S DONE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

182 LET DAD COOK

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LET DAD COOK”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 183–184

183 DAD'S APRON, DAD'S RULES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S APRON, DAD’S RULES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

184 KISS THE COOK? BRING PIE INSTEAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “KISS THE COOK? BRING PIE INSTEAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 185–186

185 MASTER OF MEAT & MASHED POTATOES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MASTER OF MEAT & MASHED POTATOES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

186 FORKS OUT, DAD'S COOKING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FORKS OUT, DAD'S COOKING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 187–188

187 I COOKED. SOMEONE ELSE CLEANS.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I COOKED. SOMEONE ELSE CLEANS.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

188 I CARVED IT. THAT COUNTS AS COOKING.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I CARVED IT. THAT COUNTS AS COOKING.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 189–190

189 THANKSGIVING TOOL BELT: FORK, TONGS, NAPKIN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING TOOL BELT: FORK, TONGS, NAPKIN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

190 DAD'S HOLIDAY HARD HAT AREA

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S HOLIDAY HARD HAT AREA”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 191–192

191 CAUTION: DAD IS CARVING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CAUTION: DAD IS CARVING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

192 AUTHORIZED TURKEY PERSONNEL ONLY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “AUTHORIZED TURKEY PERSONNEL ONLY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 193–194

193 TURKEY TECH SUPPORT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY TECH SUPPORT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

194 HAVE YOU TRIED TURNING THE TURKEY OFF AND ON?

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HAVE YOU TRIED TURNING THE TURKEY OFF AND ON?”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 195–196

195

404: VEGETABLES NOT FOUND

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “404: VEGETABLES NOT FOUND”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

196

ERROR: PLATE CAPACITY EXCEEDED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ERROR: PLATE CAPACITY EXCEEDED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 197–198

197 BUFFERING... DIGESTING...

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUFFERING... DIGESTING...”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

198 DAD.EXE HAS ENTERED FOOD COMA

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD.EXE HAS ENTERED FOOD COMA”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 199–200

199 SYSTEM UPDATE: MORE GRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “SYSTEM UPDATE: MORE GRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

200 LOW BATTERY. INSERT PIE.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “LOW BATTERY. INSERT PIE.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 201–202

201 WIFI PASSWORD: PASSTHEGRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “WIFI PASSWORD: PASSTHEGRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

202 THANKSGIVING IT DEPARTMENT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING IT DEPARTMENT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 203–204

203 CTRL + ALT + DEVOUR

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “CTRL + ALT + DEVOUR”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

204 REBOOT AFTER NAP

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “REBOOT AFTER NAP”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 205–206

205 MY OTHER SHIRT HAS GRAVY ON IT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MY OTHER SHIRT HAS GRAVY ON IT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

206 THIS IS MY FANCY THANKSGIVING SHIRT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THIS IS MY FANCY THANKSGIVING SHIRT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 207–208

207 DRESSED UP FOR THE DINNER TABLE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DRESSED UP FOR THE DINNER TABLE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

208 FORMAL ATTIRE: CLEAN DAD SHIRT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FORMAL ATTIRE: CLEAN DAD SHIRT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 209–210

209 I WORE PANTS FOR THIS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I WORE PANTS FOR THIS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

210 BUTTON STATUS: UNDER PRESSURE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BUTTON STATUS: UNDER PRESSURE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 211–212

211 BELT NOT INCLUDED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BELT NOT INCLUDED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

212 ELASTIC WAISTBAND ENTHUSIAST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ELASTIC WAISTBAND ENTHUSIAST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 213–214

213 THANKSGIVING FASHION ICON

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING FASHION ICON”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

214 PLAID, PIE & POOR DECISIONS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PLAID, PIE & POOR DECISIONS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 215–216

215 FLANNEL & FEASTING

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FLANNEL & FEASTING”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

216 BEARD FULL OF CRUMBS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BEARD FULL OF CRUMBS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 217–218

217 BEARDED & BASTED

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BEARDED & BASTED”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

218 BEARD SEASON, TURKEY SEASON

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BEARD SEASON, TURKEY SEASON”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 219–220

219 DAD STACHE, TURKEY STASH

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD STACHE, TURKEY STASH”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

220 MUSTACHE RIDES: PAYMENT IN PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MUSTACHE RIDES: PAYMENT IN PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 221–222

221 THANKFUL FOR MY LITTLE TURKEYS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKFUL FOR MY LITTLE TURKEYS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

222 PAPA BEAR'S THANKSGIVING CREW

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “PAPA BEAR'S THANKSGIVING CREW”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 223–224

223 GRANDPA'S TURKEY TABLE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRANDPA'S TURKEY TABLE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

224 DAD'S FAVORITE TURKEYS CALL HIM DAD

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD'S FAVORITE TURKEYS CALL HIM DAD”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 225–226

225 RAISING TURKEYS... I MEAN KIDS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “RAISING TURKEYS... I MEAN KIDS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

226 FATHER OF THE FEAST

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FATHER OF THE FEAST”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 227–228

227 DAD'S FLOCK

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD’S FLOCK”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

228 HEAD TURKEY OF THIS FAMILY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “HEAD TURKEY OF THIS FAMILY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 229–230

229 THE KIDS CALL ME DAD, THE TURKEY CALLS ME TROUBLE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE KIDS CALL ME DAD, THE TURKEY CALLS ME TROUBLE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

230 THANKSGIVING WITH MY FAVORITE LITTLE GOBBLERS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING WITH MY FAVORITE LITTLE GOBBLERS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 231–232

231 COOL DADS BRING THE GRAVY

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “COOL DADS BRING THE GRAVY”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

232 WORLD'S OKAYEST TURKEY CARVER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “WORLD'S OKAYEST TURKEY CARVER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a smug turkey wearing a classic dad cap and holding carving utensils. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 233–234

233 MEDIOCRE CARVING. ELITE EATING.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MEDIOCRE CARVING. ELITE EATING.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey pitmaster wearing an apron and gripping barbecue tongs. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a vintage sports-logo layout with a strong mascot in the center, arched top text and a compact bottom line. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

234 AVERAGE DAD. ABOVE-AVERAGE APPETITE.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “AVERAGE DAD. ABOVE-AVERAGE APPETITE.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a turkey holding a meat thermometer like a serious scientific instrument. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Create an arched headline over the character with a compact ribbon-style footer, keeping the silhouette easy to read on a shirt. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 235–236

235 I'M NOT SAYING I'M THE FAVORITE, BUT I BROUGHT PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M NOT SAYING I'M THE FAVORITE, BUT I BROUGHT PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a comically overloaded Thanksgiving dinner plate with potatoes, stuffing, rolls and turkey. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

236 DAD JOKE LOADING...

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DAD JOKE LOADING...”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 237–238

237 I'VE GOT 99 PROBLEMS BUT PIE AIN'T ONE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I’VE GOT 99 PROBLEMS BUT PIE AIN’T ONE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

238 ZERO REGRETS, THREE PLATES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “ZERO REGRETS, THREE PLATES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 239–240

239 FEAST AROUND AND FIND OUT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “FEAST AROUND AND FIND OUT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

240 GIVE ME PIE OR GIVE ME A NAP

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GIVE ME PIE OR GIVE ME A NAP”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Dad's Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 241–242

241 EAT. NAP. DAD JOKE. REPEAT.

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “EAT. NAP. DAD JOKE. REPEAT.”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Thanksgiving Mascot: bold 1960s–70s screen-print illustration with chunky ink shapes, imperfect registration, worn halftone texture and playful mascot energy. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

242 TURKEY TODAY, SANDWICH TOMORROW

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “TURKEY TODAY, SANDWICH TOMORROW”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Vintage Collegiate: old-school varsity typography, arched athletic lettering, small collegiate stars, distressed ink and a heritage sweatshirt-print feel. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 243–244

243 THE LEFTOVERS WILL RISE AGAIN

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THE LEFTOVERS WILL RISE AGAIN”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dad-style mustache paired with a drumstick, fork and tiny fall leaves. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Groovy Dad Humor: rounded 1970s bubble lettering, wavy baselines, retro bursts, tiny daisies or leaves and warm nostalgic print texture. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Dad’s Flannel: deep rust, forest green, warm tan, cream and dark chocolate. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

244 THANKSGIVING: THE PREQUEL TO LEFTOVERS

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “THANKSGIVING: THE PREQUEL TO LEFTOVERS”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a sleepy turkey sunk into a recliner with a tiny dinner plate balanced nearby. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Western Thanksgiving: weathered western slab-serif lettering, rope-like dividers, tiny stars, rustic badge framing and vintage ranch-sign character. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Pie Counter: caramel, pecan brown, dusty orange, vanilla cream and muted burgundy. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 245–246

245 I'M ALREADY THINKING ABOUT TOMORROW'S SANDWICH

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “I'M ALREADY THINKING ABOUT TOMORROW'S SANDWICH”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a football-turkey mashup mascot posed like a vintage sports logo. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Comic Dad Energy: bold comic lettering, halftone shadows, speed lines, exaggerated reaction marks and a punchy vintage-panel composition. Add a few tiny autumn leaves, crumbs, steam curls and retro starbursts as secondary accents; keep them sparse and intentional. COLOR PALETTE — Harvest Shop: pumpkin orange, toasted mustard, espresso brown, warm cream and muted olive. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

246 MAY YOUR TURKEY BE MOIST & YOUR RELATIVES BRIEF

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MAY YOUR TURKEY BE MOIST & YOUR RELATIVES BRIEF”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a recliner, remote and plate arranged like an official dad command center. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a circular-but-open emblem arrangement with the character breaking into the negative space while all text stays highly legible. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Mid-Century Diner: 1950s diner-sign typography, simple flat mascot shapes, starbursts, checker accents and slightly faded printed texture. Use subtle ink distress, tiny speckles and worn edges to make the finished art feel printed rather than digitally sterile. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 247–248

247

MAY YOUR GRAVY BE THICK & YOUR SMALL TALK SHORT

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “MAY YOUR GRAVY BE THICK & YOUR SMALL TALK SHORT”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a pumpkin-pie slice character guarding the dessert table like security. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Use a strong centered badge composition with the phrase wrapping above and below the main character. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Hand-Drawn Dad Doodle: loose hand-inked lettering, imperfect doodle accents, chunky outlines and intentionally casual sketchbook charm. Give the character a deadpan expression that sells the dad joke without needing any extra wording. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

248

BLESS THIS FEAST AND THIS RECLINER

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “BLESS THIS FEAST AND THIS RECLINER”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a dinner-roll mascot with butter melting dramatically over the top. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Retro Workwear Badge: utility-patch composition with condensed block type, stitched-badge cues, small tool-like icons and rugged vintage distress. Use exaggerated scale for one comedic prop—an enormous fork, gravy spoon, pie slice or drumstick—to make the joke readable at thumbnail size. COLOR PALETTE — Cranberry Table: cranberry red, burnt orange, sage green, ivory and charcoal. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

THANKSGIVING DAD • PROMPTS 249–250

249 DEAR LORD, PLEASE LET THERE BE ENOUGH PIE

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “DEAR LORD, PLEASE LET THERE BE ENOUGH PIE”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a confident gravy boat character with a mustache and oversized serving spoon. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Build a tall stacked composition with one oversized keyword, smaller supporting words and the illustration locked into the lower third. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Classic Thanksgiving Cartoon: friendly hand-drawn turkey/food character art, thick outlines, expressive poses, limited spot colors and vintage greeting-card humor. Keep the supporting objects chunky and simplified so the design remains readable when printed small. COLOR PALETTE — Game Day Feast: navy, pumpkin orange, golden yellow, warm cream and brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.

250 GRACE, GRAVY & DAD JOKES

Create a funny Thanksgiving Dad merchandise design built around the exact readable phrase “GRACE, GRAVY & DAD JOKES”. The joke should feel unmistakably dad-centered—dry, confident, slightly over-serious about food, football, carving, leftovers, naps or household dad duties—while staying clean enough for a broad family Thanksgiving audience. FEATURED ART: a stack of leftover turkey sandwiches built absurdly tall. Give the character or object a clear comedic attitude and a bold silhouette that reads instantly from a distance. COMPOSITION: Make the phrase the dominant visual, then weave the character and food accents through the letterforms without sacrificing readability. Establish a deliberate text hierarchy: the funniest or most important word should be the largest, secondary wording should support it, and no decorative element may cover or distort the phrase. STYLE — Bold Typographic: phrase-first composition with oversized custom lettering, tight hierarchy, dimensional shadowing and only a few supporting Thanksgiving accents. Use tiny motion marks and reaction lines around the main prop to add energy without clutter. COLOR PALETTE — Retro Kitchen: avocado green, harvest gold, burnt orange, cream and dark brown. Limit the palette so the artwork feels cohesive and screen-print friendly, with warm cream used strategically for contrast. FINISH: merchandise-ready isolated artwork with crisp edges, intentional negative space, strong balance, and enough detail to feel premium without becoming busy. TEXT RULE: reproduce only the supplied phrase exactly as written; do not add dates, slogans, labels, fake brand names, signatures or pseudo-text. OUTPUT: transparent background, centered standalone artwork only. No shirt or garment mockup, no person wearing the design, no rectangular scene or background panel, no photorealistic human, no copyrighted character, no celebrity likeness, no real brand logo, no watermark and no unintended extra letters.